

One-day pay cut for late attendance

- Staff Reporter

Over two hundred and sixty government employees of different offices in Chatrapur, district headquarter town of Ganjam district in Odisha are going to lose one day's salary for their late attendance in office.

On Wednesday, Ganjam district collector along with some senior officials of the administration had made surprise check of attendance at different government offices in Chatrapur.

These offices included the office of the collector, sub-collector, Chatrapur Notified Area Council (NAC), government treasury, Regional Transport Office, civil supplies, mass education etc. It was found that in most government offices, the staff were not reporting for duty on time.

Ganjam administration has decided to direct authorities of respective departments to deduct one day's salary of the staff who were found to have not reported for duty on time on Wednesday.
